

FATE OF NAZIS IN BALANCE AT ALLIED PARLEY

Roosevelt And Churchill Leave Cairo For Session With Joseph Stalin

ence in North Africa was a forewarning to Emperor Hirohito that the days of Japan's dominance in the Pacific area are drawing to a close.

The campaign mapped by President Roosevelt, Churchill and Chiang Kai-Shek involves, first, the crushing of Japan as a military power, and, secondly, the stripping from Nippon of all the territories conquered by the Japs since 1895.

The plan has as its prime objective the unconditional surrender of Japan, the sole condition under which hostilities will cease as provided in the Casablanca declaration by President Roosevelt and Churchill.

Third Rate Power Japan is to be relegated to the status of a third-rate power with all her resources which would aid future aggressions removed.

The principals gathered for the week-long conference, from Monday, November 21, through Saturday, November 27, after travelling vast distances by air and sea. President Roosevelt crossed the Atlantic and North Africa by air. Generalissimo Chiang and Madame Chiang, wife of the Chinese president and premier who acted as his interpreter, came across Asia by plane. Churchill made the greater part of his journey aboard a British warship.

View Global Aspects Although the main discussions at the parley involved the smashing of Nippon, the three leaders, before leaving North Africa for undisclosed destinations, also viewed the global aspects of the war.

The high commands of all three nations were present at the conference, including operational chiefs in the main theater of operations. The American party which joined President Roosevelt numbered just under 100. Churchill's staff consisted of some 200, while Gen. Chiang brought with him a score of leaders to participate in the talks.

The communique issued on the results of the conference set forth at the Allied aims that:

1. "Japan shall be stripped of all the islands in the Pacific which she has seized or occupied since the beginning of the first world war in 1914." Involved besides the Philippines and the East Indies are all other islands grabbed off by the Japs and the Caroline, Marshall and Mariana groups which Japan had held under mandate from the League of Nations.

2. "All the territories Japan has stolen from the Chinese such as Manchuria, Formosa and the Pescadores shall be restored to the republic of China." Manchuria was overrun by the Japs in 1931. Formosa and the Pescadores both were taken by Japan in 1895 when China was defeated in war.

Freedom For Korea 3. America, Britain and China, "mindful of the enslavement of the people of Korea, are determined that in due course Korea may become free and independent."

The conferees agreed that "Japan will also be expelled from all other territories which she has taken by violence and greed" of the war aims of the three powers in the Pacific, the communique said.

"The three great Allies are fighting this war to restrain and punish the aggression of Japan. They covet no gain for themselves and have no thought of territorial expansion."

The communique was prefaced by a declaration which stated:

"The several military missions have agreed on future military operations against Japan. The three great Allies expressed their resolve to bring unrelenting pressure to bear on Japan."

The Allied leaders cautioned, however, that extremely bitter struggles lay ahead. The United Nations, they emphasized, will have to "persevere in the serious and prolonged operations necessary to procure the unconditional surrender of Japan."

The conference marked the first time that the Chinese generalissimo had come face to face with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. The magnitude of the parley was obvious due to the presence of more than 300 military experts and other advisers included in the three parties.

Chief among these in American military ranks who attended were Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the U. S. Army; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the U. S. Army Air Forces; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet; Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied supreme commander in the Mediterranean; Admiral the Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of King George VI, who is supreme commander in southeast Asia, was the principal British field commander present. Conspicuous by his absence was Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander in the southwest Pacific.

liantly complemented her husband's political astuteness. She is go-between and interpreter for the generalissimo in all his foreign relations.

The generalissimo had gone into voluntary political retirement when, in 1927, he married the former May-Sing Soong. Five years later he emerged as sole ruler of China.

Madame Chiang spoke for China in the years that followed. She was the first one to hint that open war with Japan was imminent so that China might survive as a nation. It was Madame Chiang who apologized for the accidental bombing of the international settlement in Shanghai by Chinese flyers. When her husband was kidnapped by insurgent troops it was Madame Chiang who engineered his release without payment or promise of ransom.

The generalissimo and his wife visited Mahatma Gandhi together and the discussions which led up to the granting of important economic concessions to China included China's first lady.

Madame Chiang's influence over her husband dates back to the early days of their marriage when he was converted to Christianity through her efforts.

Since then she has been with him whenever she was not acting as his representative or embassy without regard for her personal safety. She has endured bombardment and visited bombed-out areas throughout the long and bloody sino-Japanese war.

She served as commander-in-chief of the Chinese air force and is credited with the pre-war development and expansion of China's air defenses. More important than any of her official posts, however, has been her work as confidante and advisor of the generalissimo.

No history of this era will be complete without the report of the part which Madame Chiang Kai-Shek has played in the relations between China and the western world.

the coast they left heavy demolitions to impede the progress of the Eighth which also was hampered by heavy new rains in this battle area.

Allied air support to Gen. Montgomery's ground forces was described as magnificent and the combined action of airmen and British soldiers nullified the Nazi effort to stem the tide by sending down reinforcements from northern Italy.

Quantities of German guns and equipment were abandoned in the Sangro river defenses. When the British gained control of fortifications they found the defenses extremely well organized. There were many dugouts, entrenchments, wire barriers and minefields.

Americans Win American troops of the Fifth Army covering the western half of the trans-peninsular battle-front beat off two determined counterattacks by German infantry. One enemy thrust was launched near Filigrano, four miles north of Venafro. The other took place southwest of Mignano.

The Yanks took prisoners who were part of the German 44th infantry division, newly arrived on the front line. The appearance of these troops brought to 11 the total of Nazi divisions known to be at the front.

Headquarters disclosed that American Warhawks, Invaders and Spitfires had carried out intensive aerial barrages against the German winter line in advance of the Fifth Army. The assault reached a peak when the airmen hit targets along a 20-mile stretch every 10 minutes for three hours south of Cassino. When the invaders joined in the fray they blasted the railroad east of Formia and monastery ridge near Calabritta Rocca.

Another large scale attack by American Flying Fortresses on the Fiat ballbearing factory at Turin also was revealed. Previously the plant was badly damaged in an attack November 8.

Premier Hideki Tojo sought to discredit the Cairo conference agreements, saying that they were necessary to drive home to the Allied peoples the seriousness of the situation. However, observers in the United Nations were prone to believe the conferences indicated that the situation was "serious" only to the enemy.

There were scant details of present active military operations against the Japanese in the South and Central Pacific. However, Allied surface vessels bombarded Gasmatra and heavy bombers blasted a Cape Gloucester air-drome, both in New Britain.

The Russians hammered at retreating German forces along the Gorn-Minsk railway while tank battles flared elsewhere in Russia.

SCHOOL REMAINS CLOSED

Pickaway township school remained closed to pupils Thursday although administrators had hoped classes could be resumed. Adjustments must be made in the heating system before school can be resumed. A new stoker which arrived Wednesday has been installed. School was suspended after the heating system broke down. There have been no classes for the last three weeks.

measure he had to leave subsidy hearing's at noon.

Wagner attempted to arrange for hearings through the afternoon but was unable to do so. Other members serving on other committees or working on the soldier voting bill are Sens. Tobey (R) N. H. and Taft (R) Ohio.

Wagner, nevertheless, prepared to hear Price Administrator Chester Bowles and other OPA men today in behalf of the subsidy program. He agreed, further, to arrange for Carey to return next Wednesday, and to hear additional anti-subsidy pleas of farm groups next Monday and Tuesday.

Chief concern of the committee today is the number of conflicting figures on living costs which have been presented by both sides as the authentic compilation of government agencies such as the OPA and the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Some of the statistics appear to prove an upward spurt in living costs while others indicate more rapid increases in wages.

Both opponents and proponents have come in with masses of figures dealing both with percentages and with dollar-and-cent changes in the national economy.

Labor is insisting that the increase in pay rates and not the rise in the amount of "take home" pay should be the basis of subsidy consideration on the ground that "take home" pay is the result of additional work and not a pay increase.

pose the Caroline, Marshall and Mariana groups.

Japan originally was promised these islands as the price of her willingness to join the Allied side in the 1914-18 war. The promise was made by Great Britain, France, Italy and Russia in the form of secret agreements. These agreements were kept a profound secret from the American government at the time, and were not divulged until the late President Woodrow Wilson went to Paris to attend the peace conference.

Wilson refused to recognize the validity of the secret agreements and insisted that Japan's control of the islands be restricted to a mandate, which forbid her to fortify them. Japan nevertheless did fortify them and failed to respect nearly all her mandatory obligations in respect to the islands.

It is generally believed that the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor was launched from the Marshall group. Whether or not a United

RATION COSTS DROP FOR ALL CUTS OF BEEF

Increase Of 30 Percent In Meat Is Predicted
By Federals

DURATION NOT DECIDED

Pork, Lamb And Mutton All
Unchanged—Canned Fish Values Hoisted

Reduction of points for the entire list of beef cuts, ranging from steaks to hamburger, becomes effective Sunday with most cuts slashed from two to three ration points. About 30 percent more meat will be provided under the new ration program than previously, OPA pointed out.

How long the reductions will be effective is not known. OPA spokesmen declaring that January and February may see the point values just as high as they have been in the last few months. The point cuts which become effective Sunday put the beef situation about the same level that it was last March.

The cut has been made possible by substantial increase in beef production which normally reaches its peak in the last two months of the year.

Most pork items will remain at the reduced value set by OPA in mid-November when a slash of two points a pound was ordered for this meat.

Point values of lamb and mutton items and practically all veal remain unchanged.

Butter Unchanged

Butter, however, will remain in December at its present high value of sixteen points a pound and margarine will continue at its present rate of six points a pound.

Fairly sharp increases in point values were announced for all types of cheese and major canned fish items. American cheese was raised two points to ten points a pound and cream cheeses were increased three points to eight points a pound. Swiss, Muenster, Brie, and similar cheeses were boosted two points to a total of eight points a pound.

All rationed canned fish, except oysters, were raised four points to a total of sixteen points a pound. Oysters were dropped one point to four points a pound. Lard was cut one point to a total of two points a pound and shortening, salad and cooking oils were left unchanged at five points a pound.

The OPA said that the average point value of all rationed meat in December will be slightly less than five points a pound compared with an average of six and one third points a pound at the beginning of November.

Beef Cuts Listed

As examples of the cut in beef points, OPA listed the following changes:

Porterhouse steak, nine points a pound beginning December 5 instead of 12 at present; top round, 10 instead of 13; ten-inch rib roast, six instead of nine; rump, bone in, five instead of eight; hamburger, six instead of seven. Three new cuts, rolled rib roast, rolled sirloin and rolled short loin made from utility grades of beef, were added to the consumer table at 10 points for the short loin and nine for the other cuts per pound. OPA said that veal, lamb and mutton supplies are expected to be fairly good in December but that the point value of these meats was not cut, with the exception of a few reductions for veal, because substantial point reductions had been made in November.

As for pork, OPA said that many of the choicer pork cuts retain the two point reduction made in November but that some adjustments had to be made on items which are comparatively scarce. Thus, all hams and most bacon cuts were increased one point and such cuts as pork plates and knuckles which were made ration-free in November were put back on the December table at one point a pound. Rationed sausages, with the exception of dry and semi-dry sausages, were cut one or two points.

The ration agency said that the increase for canned fish was made necessary because demand was exceeding supply and that butter was kept at its present rate because, although production is starting to increase, it still is about 10 percent less than last year.

OPA said that the increase from two to three points in rationed

MAJOR LOOPS AGREE TO PLAY 154-GAME SKED

Baseball To Be Operated In Full Style Despite Manpower Problem

ALL-STAR TILT SET
Several Clubs Debating Over Number Of Night Frays To Be Booked

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, Dec. 2—Major league baseball will be on in full blossom next season.

They are going to go in spite of the toughest war ever waged since they were organized. They had to quit during the last World War. It seemed likely that the drain on manpower, the restrictions on transportation and the uncertainty of the times would cause a cessation of baseball hostilities, but in the face of everything the Majors will be doing business at the same old stand and about seven Minor leagues will go again.

All this became quite evident today as the annual baseball meetings trundled along toward their ultimate conclusion, with some bickering among the minors over their own particular government headed by Judge William G. Bramham and considerable indecision over what procedure they should adopt.

The point is, however, that baseball is going to go again. The Majors will operate with whatever manpower they can muster and the spectators will have to like it. Schedules will be made up for 154 games—the usual amount—the All-Star game will be held at Pittsburgh on July 11, and the only squabble of consequence before the Majors centers around night baseball. The Washington Senators have been given the right to play all the night games they choose, except on Sundays and holidays, beginning May 15. The St. Louis Cardinals and Browns want to play unlimited night games also and this point is to be cleared up momentarily.

Like Normal Times
That's about all that has transpired so far at the Major league meetings—and that makes it important because everything is being conducted just as though these were normal times.

In the midst of all the turmoil over who is going to get the best of whom in the baseball phenagling between the Minors and the Majors and vice versa there have been a couple of comforting items about individuals.

The New York Giants announced that Carl Hubbell would not be cut adrift to graze with the common herd in some far-away pasture and that he would be retained with the club as manager of the farm and scouts. That was a day or two ago.

Then yesterday, young Bob Carpenter, a fight manager, a fight promoter, a professional basketball promoter and a former Duke university football player, announced that Herb Pennock would be general manager of the Philadelphia Phillies. Young Bob Carpenter is head of the Phillies—the owner under the latest shake-up.

Herb Pennock is one of the names in baseball that causes people to pause and ponder, for here was a Yankee in the days when the Yankees were the greatest thing that ever dug a spike in turf.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—If it were not for some adroit political maneuvering, and the ability to recognize a good reversal of opinion, Judge William G. Bramham would not be czar of the Minor leagues today, and the leagues would be open to the most radical movement ever instituted in organized baseball.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK HIGH ELEVEN TO MEET

CHICAGO, Dec. 2—St. George high school's football players, city-wide prep champions and co-champions of the Catholic league, started drills again today in preparation for their game December 12 at Baker Field, Columbia university, with Mount St. Michael, New York city title-holder.

Coach Max Burnell, announcing acceptance of Mount St. Michael's invitation, said the entire squad of 35 would leave for the East next Thursday. St. George, beaten only once and that in a pre-season game, will take a regular season record of nine victories and one tie with them to New York. Mount St. Michael was unbeaten during the season.

The Washington Senators will have an unlimited number of night games, and the rest of the clubs are restricted to fourteen. The sole exception to the arc game rule might lie in the St. Louis clubs, which have not yet received a decision on their requests for an unlimited number of night games.

COUNCIL OKEHS FIREMEN, POLICE SALARY HOISTS

New Scale In Effect On January 1, Continuing For Entire Year

UNANIMOUS ROLL CALL

Pay Increases Also Voted For City Solicitor And Health Clerk

Circleville firemen and policemen and the chiefs of both departments will receive pay increases beginning January 1 and continuing for a year.

Council passed an ordinance under suspension of rules Wednesday evening giving each member of the two departments "bonuses" during 1944. Because of complications which sometimes arise when a council tries to reduce a salary of a public employee after it is once boosted, council termed the pay boosts as "bonuses" in its ordinance. If the salary schedule is to be continued during subsequent years it will have to be voted again.

Under the measure firemen will receive salaries of $130 a month, each of the members of the department drawing a $15 a month "bonus". The chief's pay will be bumped by $10 which will make him $145. The same schedule prevails for Police Chief W. F. McCrady who now draws $135. Policemen will receive boosts of $10 a month putting their pay at $35.

Motion Passed
Councilman W. M. Reid expressed belief that members of the police and fire departments should receive the same amount of pay. It was voted for suspension of rules and passage of the ordinance after Finance Chairman George L. Crites said that by boosting the firemen $15 and policemen $10 the differential is somewhat reduced. Crites added that there are many arguments on both sides concerning whether policemen or firemen are deserving of more pay.

Another pay boost was voted Wednesday night. Mrs. Harriett Wallace, clerk of the city health board and registrar of vital statistics, receiving an additional $200 a year. At present, Mrs. Wallace is paid $50 a month. This increase was voted without opposition.

Solicitor Hoisted
A $200 a year increase for Solicitor Joe W. Adkins became official when council voted that his annual pay will be $900 instead of $700 beginning January 1. Adkins was instructed at the last meeting to prepare necessary legislation.

A request for an increase from $2,230 to $1,500 a year was read to council from City Auditor Lillian M. Young. The question was referred to the finance committee.

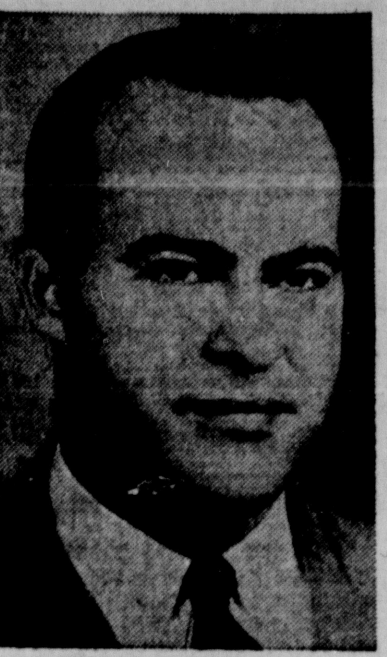

Another financial question was discussed with Councilman Don Mason informing council that unless a claim of $300 due Miller Fissell is paid that a law suit will probably be started against the city. Mason said that Fissell has due him $300 for city use of his motorcycle and other equipment during 1940, 1941 and 1942.

The claim has been in the hands of the laws and claims committee since early last Spring. No action has been taken. Council instructed the laws and claims committee to investigate the case and make a final report at the meeting in two weeks.

Mayor Reports
Mayor Ben Gordon reported collections of $105 during November, $1 being from a license fee and the other $104 from forfeited bonds.

Contract Ordered On Operation Of Rural Fire Truck By City

Acting Safety Director Clarence Helvering was authorized Wednesday evening by council to enter into a contract with the Volunteer Fire Protective association for care and operation of the fire truck which is housed in Circleville and serves nine rural townships.

The contract was read by Clerk Fred Nicholas, and Joe W. Adkins, solicitor, said that officers of the Volunteer Fire Protective association had approved it. The contract will be submitted December 9 to representatives of the nine townships which own the truck for their approval.

Under the measure which becomes effective December 1 and continues for three years, the Volunteer association will pay all expenses incurred by the truck and will pay $5 to the fire department for each call into one of the nine townships.

The rural truck has been in service three years without a contract ever having been signed, and without any insurance being obtained to protect firemen and property during a run to a farm fire. Circleville firemen have answered 101 calls to rural areas in the three years' time.

Expenses of the truck will be paid by each township, the trustees of each putting $50 a year into the Volunteer association's hands.

Circleville will house the truck, provide all oil and gasoline and furnish a statement regularly to the association so the bill can be paid; will furnish a member of the fire department to man the truck, and will furnish a statement each 90 days concerning the country runs.

The association will assume all responsibility for any damage, injury or loss occurring to any person or property in any way connected with the housing of the truck and equipment; will carry not less than $5,000 property damage insurance and $25,000 and $50,000 personal liability insurance; will pay for all gasoline and oil, will pay $5 to the fire department for each run, and will provide all assistance possible at the scene of a rural fire.

The rural truck will be made available for use in Circleville in case of emergency. In case the truck is needed in a community not included in the Volunteer association a charge of $25 shall be paid by the property owner needing the truck.

The contract was agreed on after firemen set November 30 as a deadline for answering rural calls unless insurance was taken out to protect them in case of accident during a run to a country fire or when a country fire was being fought. After they were informed that such action was being taken, Chief Talmer Wise said his men would continue to respond to calls into the nine townships which include Circleville, Washington, Pickaway, Wayne, Jackson, Walnut, Muhlenberg, Scioto and Madison.

MISS RICHARDSON QUILTS AT BERGER HOSPITAL

Resignation of Miss Rose Leah Richardson, Berger hospital superintendent for the last several months, was read to Circleville council Wednesday night by J. Donald Mason, chairman of the council's hospital committee.

Miss Richardson expects to remain at the hospital until she receives a call for service in the Navy Nursing Corps. She has already filed her application for appointment to the Navy corps.

Date for the resignation to become effective will not be determined until Miss Richardson receives her notice to report.

HOW TO REPAIR A LAMP OR APPLIANCE PLUG

The most common cause of blown-out fuses is a defective appliance or lamp plug. The wires leading into the plug become worn or frayed so that bare wires may touch. Then bingo—a fuse blows.

Avoid this annoyance by regularly inspecting plugs. When you find a bad connection, repair by following these steps. If plug is cracked or broken, replace with new one and rewire in same way.

- 1 Loosen the two screws holding wires in the plug. Pull out the wire.
- 2 Cut off frayed part of wire. Strip off a half inch of insulation on each wire.
- 3 Tie wires in loose knot on insulated portion. This helps prevent wires from pulling loose.
- 4 Re-connect wires, curling each around a prong and around screw post. Tighten screws.

COUNCIL WEIGHS REPAIR WORK ON RAILROAD AT CITY AUCTION

Failure of the Norfolk and Western railroad to acknowledge requests made by Circleville council for repair work and for other consideration came in for attention in council Wednesday evening when several members declared that several conditions need to be corrected.

Solicitor Joe W. Adkins informed council he had written the general superintendent asking that something be done about several crossings in the city, and he also protested blocking of South Court street for as long as 30 minutes at night when milk is being loaded. Several persons have told councilmen that the trains can be pulled ahead easily, thus clearing the street.

Councilman Boyd Horn also asked that the city take steps to slow down army convoys when there is no need for them to be using great haste through the city, but was informed that there is nothing that can be done about army vehicles. Ambulances, too, take too many liberties in Circleville.

HOW TO REPAIR A LAMP OR APPLIANCE PLUG

The most common cause of blown-out fuses is a defective appliance or lamp plug. The wires leading into the plug become worn or frayed so that bare wires may touch. Then bingo—a fuse blows.

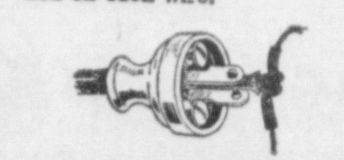

Avoid this annoyance by regularly inspecting plugs. When you find a bad connection, repair by following these steps. If plug is cracked or broken, replace with new one and rewire in same way.

1 Loosen the two screws holding wires in the plug. Pull out the wire.

2 Cut off frayed part of wire. Strip off a half inch of insulation on each wire.

3 Tie wires in loose knot on insulated portion. This helps prevent wires from pulling loose.

4 Re-connect wires, curling each around a prong and around screw post. Tighten screws.

COUNCIL WEIGHS REPAIR WORK ON RAILROAD

Failure of the Norfolk and Western railroad to acknowledge requests made by Circleville council for repair work and for other consideration came in for attention in council Wednesday evening when several members declared that several conditions need to be corrected.

Solicitor Joe W. Adkins informed council he had written the general superintendent asking that something be done about several crossings in the city, and he also protested blocking of South Court street for as long as 30 minutes at night when milk is being loaded. Several persons have told council that the trains can be pulled ahead easily, thus clearing the street.

Councilman Boyd Horn also asked that the city take steps to slow down army convoys when there is no need for them to be using great haste through the city, but was informed that there is nothing that can be done about army vehicles. Ambulances, too, take too many liberties in Circle-

RETRIBUTION

FIRE from Heaven fell on the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah and consumed them. Their very sites were obliterated and their tale was left as a warning to the wicked while the world should last.

Fire falls likewise now, in these stormy latter days, upon the mighty capital of the nation which launched this present war. Here is a man-made deluge of flame and smoke and thunder such as the world never saw before, except perhaps in the volcanic destruction of Pompeii and Herculaneum.

We cannot grasp the basic realities of such catastrophes. But surely it does seem, to the decent people who are a majority of mankind, that the bombardment of Berlin, and the immense devastation resulting, though wrought with human hands, represent a judgment of God on a nation and a city for the enormous wickedness they have practised.

A thousand texts could be found in the Bible, to point this moral. As man or nation soweth, that they shall also reap.

CAR THEFTS

A new way to stop automobile theft is to be tried in Massachusetts. There were 320 stolen cars reported there in the first two weeks of November. Though nearly all were recovered promptly, it meant much unnecessary work for the already overburdened police. Unnecessary, because often the theft was invited by the driver leaving his keys in the ignition lock.

Determined to stop such foolishness, Frank A. Goodwin, state registrar of motor vehicles, plans to suspend the license of any such careless motorist.

This sounds a good deal like the Dutch mother who stopped her children from falling into the canal by spanking them when they did. But it worked in their case, and it may work also with the naughty children of Massachusetts.

TRAVELING

It takes 75 trains to move an armored division. So says the Pennsylvania Railroad, which ought to know.

Every carload of wives going to visit their husbands in service, or of people bored with home life who are running over to New York, Chicago or San Francisco to shop and see the shows, makes travel hard for that many soldiers being moved from one post to another or trying to get home once more before going overseas.

It is too high a price to pay for the satisfaction of the individual traveler. Good mottoes to remember are: "Travel unnecessarily and help Hitler; stay at home, and the boys will come back quicker."

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up early and soon away for the plant, there to take up duties that have multiplied with the progress of the war, multiplied to such an extent that no longer is the antiquated reporter able to find time to get out of the office and dig for such items as have filled this column for the last eight years. The writing is easy if the material is available, but obtaining that material requires several hours each day. And the scrivener does not get out of the plant, not even for lunch, from about 6 in the morning until 6 at night. So, until the war is over and the manpower shortage is relieved the antiquated reporter will be penning this column only as sufficient items to fill it accumulate.

It was a long time ago when Harry Hill went to school out at Pershon. Seventy-five boys and girls in the grades there then and of that number 26 men and six women, all more than 70 years of age, still are living and residents of Pickaway county. Harry passed on the names of the men, but refused to disclose identity of the women. "Women are touchy about their age," he declared, "and I'm revealing no secrets. The men are Fred Trump, William and Nelson Reid, Brough and James Pherson, Will and Paul Timmons, Joe Grabill, Will, Charles and Homer Neff, Carl Back, John Phillips, Marion and George Trimble, Robert, Ed, Harry and Charles Hill, Steptoe, Taswell and Claud Heath, Thomas Shepherd, James Heath, Nelson Hill and George Ingram.

Home in most instances means more to the boy in service than it does to civilians. Allen Smith was in training at the Great Lakes Naval station, and one day saw his name posted with some three score others slated for submarine duty. A call had gone out for volunteers for this branch and Seaman Smith had not volunteered. He called on his commanding officer, intent on advising him that he was not a submarine volunteer and that he preferred other branches of naval service. Before he had a chance to explain the officer commented on the fact that the sub volunteers were to get seven-day furloughs. Smith said not a single word of protest of his assignment. Anything to get back to Circleville if only for a week.

Cum Robinson was home on furlough from Macon, Ga. "Thought you won non-com stripes," a friend said. "Oh, I've been up there several times, but always something happens." Cum declared, "The last time I was a corporal and guarding 13 Italian prisoners of war. I loaded them on a truck and when I had difficulty getting aboard I handed my rifle to one of the Eyties to hold until I got on. A shave-tail saw me and I was a private again. And then there was the time I saw Jake Moore. He was coring the parade grounds and we were drilling. I hadn't seen Jake for a year, so I broke ranks and went over and talked to him. A private again. Guess I really am a PFD, a private for the duration."

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

MANPOWER WASTED

WASHINGTON—If the Army and Navy really want to save manpower and postpone the drafting of fathers, they might take a leaf from the book of venerable Admiral William Leahy, the President's chief of staff. No private guards or orderlies clutter his house, as they do those of certain other high-ranking persons. Instead, the admiral answers the door himself.

But if you approach the home of Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the fleet, a guard stops you on the grounds of the Naval Observatory while another guard is posted in front of the admiral's house. At this stage of the war it is inconceivable that an enemy might molest Admiral King's home. Joke is that the armed guards are posted outside a home which the admiral rarely occupies, for he usually sleeps on his yacht on the Potomac.

These dribbles of manpower are not important taken singly, but they are when you add them up. Lump together the lonely soldiers who will stand guard around the perfectly safe halls of congress, plus the heavy battery of regular troops which supplement the regular and efficient White House guards, plus all the other sentries standing watch around drowsy offices—and you get quite a total.

Jesse Jones, for instance, still requires a battery of guards to scrutinize visitors entering his commerce building when there is nothing inside which the enemy would want, except the fish aquarium in the basement. So does Henry Morgenthau require guards. Government personnel and budgets could be reduced by thousands now that the war has improved and J. Edgar Hoover has proved there is little enemy danger from within.

Finally, if the Army reduced the number of the U. S. troops patiently marking time in Alaska, now that Kiska and Attu have been cleaned out, several extra divisions would be available.

INVESTIGATE GOOD NEIGHBORS

Inside fact about Senator Butler's attack on the Good Neighbor policy is that the Nebraskan was given most of his ammunition by the U. S. embassies in Latin America. Unfortunate truth is that a lot of career diplomats distrust the two-fisted reform tactics of the Rockefeller office and were glad to spill their views to a listening senator.

Butler spent only two days in some countries. He hardly had time to get beyond the U. S. embassy and the fashionable clubs frequented by American business men.

In Rio, for example, Ambassador Jefferson Caffery told him, "At the rate we are pouring money into the Amazon, it will cost us hundreds of dollars for every pound of rubber." Ambassador Messersmith in Mexico City, who had a long-standing feud with the BEW, was glad to tell Butler that agencies outside the State department were muddying the waters of diplomacy.

Thus, Butler's report is an explosive symposium of all the complaints of U. S. diplomats who don't like to be speeded up by aggressive young Nelson Rockefeller, plus the complaints of U. S. business men who distrust federal spending anywhere.

However, the Butler probe may crack together the heads of U. S. representatives and teach them to cooperate. The cure for Butler's complaints is not cancellation of

DIET AND HEALTH

Food Prejudices Hard To Explain

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"I REMEMBER it only too well," said my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs. "Sunday noon. That was when my Uncle John used to come and have dinner with us. This goes back to about 1880.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

"Well, Saturday must have been a terrible day every week for Mother. When she went to market I could hear her murmuring under her shawl—John doesn't eat fish, and they have such nice bass in the market now."

"The list of things Uncle John did not eat would stretch from here to Moscow. And in the present later years of my life I wonder how he acquired those food habits."

Food Prejudices Unexplainable

"I can assess myself and I can see that I have any number of food habits that are simple nonsense. For instance, I can not eat liver. Any kind of liver!—chicken, beef, lamb! Yet I know perfectly well that liver is a healthy food. "Not only that, but my sister Clara yawns for liver. Every time I take her to a restaurant she selects liver. So it can't be a religious prejudice, nor one based on family remembrances, or admonitions."

"Then too I got over some of my earlier prejudices. I don't recall ever seeing sausage on the table at my father's house. And until I got married I never remember to have eaten sausage. Now I can't get enough of it."

"The consequences are deeper than you would imagine, on first thought. All prison riots begin with complaints about food. Admittedly the food itself is not the only cause for a riot, but when the atmosphere in any corrective institution becomes tense, for other reasons, one bad meal is enough to bring about a violent situation.

"And when I think of the number of marriages that are wrecked on account of poorly prepared foods, I am not surprised that the divorce courts are kept busy night and day."

Men Prefer Meat

"I see by the medical papers that a gentleman by the name of Selling, in Detroit, has interviewed a number of people to try to determine their food likes and dislikes. It appears that sex has something to do with it. Sixty-seven per cent of the men he questioned preferred meat, but only 35% of the women. The women were definitely in favor of cream, cheese and canned fruit."

"What part of the country or what part of the world you live in makes a difference. The Southerner likes his chitlins. Some people can't eat if the plate is too full, and vice versa."

"I remember having saved a man's reputation once by giving him some dietary advice. It was Judge Summerville. Some lawyers came to me and said I ought to speak to him. He invariably fell asleep on the bench after the noon recess. I gave him a food questionnaire and finally talked him into having a light lunch and his heavy meal at night. That way he bothered only his family by going to sleep."

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Annual memorial services of the Circleville lodge of B. P. O. Elks were to be December 4 at the lodge home. In addition to ritualistic ceremonies, there was to be an address by the Rev. T. C. Harper of the United Brethren church and music by Miss Eleanor Snyder, accompanied by Miss Abbe Mills Clarke.

Edward Helwagen and son, Bud, of North Court street, and Paul J. Dixon, Chillicothe, returned after a hunting trip in Pennsylvania, each bringing home a deer.

Miss Bertha Allen returned to New York City after spending a few days with Mrs. Helen F. Gunning, East Main street, and Mrs. James Patton of Columbus.

10 YEARS AGO

Complete codification of all industries and trades in the nation by January 1 was the goal set by the NRA.

Stanley B. Mathewson, Columbus, state director of the National Reemployment service, announced the opening of an office in the city building for the registrations of the unemployed in the county with the exception of four townships, Monroe, Darby, Seloto and Muhlenberg, which were being handled by the Mt. Sterling office.

Miss Emmy Mulquin resigned as technician at Berger hospital where she had been employed for several months.

25 YEARS AGO

During a storm with wind reaching a high velocity, the 50-foot steel smokestack at the Rife and Morris company's elevator, East Mound street, was blown down, falling on the high tension wires

of the Ohio Utilities company and causing trouble with the fire alarm system wires.

Coblentz, the bridgehead on the Rhine which the American army was to occupy following the armistice, was formerly a fortress, dating back to the third century.

LeRoy Thompson, company cook in the fire and guard service at Pigs Point, Pa., was home on a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Thompson, Walnut township.

SWIFT MOVES and decisive action, based on a sudden opening for putting the affairs on a sound, far reaching and enduring basis, is forecast from important lunar and mutual aspects. There may be radical or strenuous activities, with excitement and commotion, affecting the emotions, mentality, and business relations. But it might be wiser to arrive at conclusions by diligence, shrewdness, sagacity and restraint rather than impetuosity, nervous tension or the use of force rather than finesse. With care the objectives may attain surprising heights, although there may be dramatic events and romantic thrills.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of an exciting, thrilling and adventurous year, in which romance, drama, upheaval and the unpredictable may be looked for in both private and public life. Sudden opportunities for attaining desired objectives require quick action but should be based on sound prophecies, cool judgment and well-organized strategies rather than force, pressure and impetuosity. Maintain poise and good judgment in the most exciting crises, shunning impulsive, erratic or irregular tactics for sound policies.

A child born on this day may have much creative talent, be industrious and mentally sound and ambitious despite erratic or singular impulses. With care it should make an outstanding success, perhaps in public place.

CHAPTER THIRTY

DENNIS—Dennis sitting there at the wheel of a sleek black roadster when she left the office—was nothing to her at all, but when Beth saw him get out of the car and come toward her, smiling, she knew that he'd been waiting for her, and something swooped up and down just once inside her breast. And, womanlike, she knew exactly what she looked like without looking in a mirror; blue jersey dress, shabby polo coat, blue felt beret with a worn spot where she stuck it on with pins, clean but mended yellow cotton gloves, oxford in need of a shine. Her hair would do, but she wasn't sure of her lipstick and, likely as not, there was a spot of carbon paper smudge somewhere on nose or cheek. Saturday noons she never stopped to repair her appearance. Now she made a mental resolution never to leave the building without being prepared for anything.

She said, "Hello, Dennis," and he said, "How do you do? Up night-clubbing until 3 o'clock, a whole morning of work, and you look as fresh as . . . as . . ."

"A daisy, Dennis? I think that's the right word."

"Maybe," he said, "but I was trying to think of something prettier. I had thought of quite a number of things I was going to tell you last night, but . . ."

"Last night was wonderful. I adored the marionettes and the Gypsy singers. Did you like them?"

"I thought you looked tired. I wasn't sure you were enjoying yourself, and I wanted you to."

Beth thought, "I'm keeping him here talking. He's probably going to see Slade."

She said, "I did. And Andrea loved it, too. Didn't we thank you?"

"You did, but I hope to be thanked another way. I hope you haven't a date for lunch, or one for the afternoon."

"I haven't," Beth said, without stopping to think he might think she was jumping at an invitation. The next moment she knew, from the pleasure in his sensitive face, that he was thinking of nothing but how fortunate he was. "Good," he said boyishly, "because I want to show you a little of the countryside and I thought you might like the food at a little place out on the Mt. Vernon Parkway."

"Shall I get in?"

He tucked a robe around her knees and said he'd put the top up on the car if she wished it.

"I love to feel the wind and it can't make me look any worse than I do."

He didn't say anything that he might have said, but he looked at her appreciatingly and said he liked little hats like hers.

"The ride was a lovely one and

Beth found that their easy conversation came back as she thought it never would, and she sensed again that shared feeling of pleasure in each other's company, whether they talked of themselves or the weather. "I think winter is really coming," she said.

He considered it as if it were a weighty statement. "Right," he agreed. "It will be December first tomorrow."

"Not tomorrow, Dennis. Monday. I can't believe that Christmas will be here so soon."

"Will you be here Christmas?"

"I expect so. We've been invited to Pennington to spend the holiday with some friends, but I don't think we'll go." She didn't say that she had been dreading it because she would remember last Christmas and all her unhappiness, or that she had decided not to go anyway when Andrea was planning to go out to Hawaii. "Of course it will depend on Andrea. She's so disappointed that she couldn't go out to marry Jim. Dennis, do you think we'll have war in the Pacific soon?"

"Only God and the Japanese government would know that, Beth, but I think Ronald was wise not to let her go out."

"Will you tell her that?"

Dennis gave her a one-sided smile. "Maybe I'm not as good at telling Andrea what to do or think as you are."

Beth plunged. "Did you ever advise her about marrying or not marrying Jim, Dennis?"

He took a long time answering and then he said, "I was not asked and there was no reason why I should have been."

Beth stared straight at the road ahead.

"Were you?"

She answered, "I was not asked and there was no reason why I should have been. I don't mean to be rude."

"I'm sure you don't. Would you be interested to know what I should have advised?"

"You know I would be."

"I should certainly have advised her to marry him, because they love each other."

"I feel the same way," she said in a low voice, and said nothing more until they came to the inn, but there were two ghosts riding with them, Andrea and Jim.

The inn was a wide-verandaed house set far back in the trees, and in the dining room a great fire blazed in a huge hearth, filling the room with warmth and light and the pleasant odor of burning hickory.

They lingered over a delicious lunch with which was served a light, fragrant wine. It was dusk before either of them realized that the afternoon was gone.

"What are you going to do tonight?" Dennis asked when he had noised the car back toward Washington. Beth thought of an evening with him and said, "I have a date with Andrea. We usually go to a movie on Saturday night."

She half expected him to say that he'd like to come along, but he said, "May I telephone later in the week? I'm flying back to Pennington Monday, but I expect to be back by Friday, or early next week, anyway."

"That would be nice."

A mile later he said, "Are you going to be at this cocktail soiree at Mrs. Seccombe's tomorrow?"

Beth brought her wandering thoughts back. She hadn't heard anything about Eunice Seccombe's having a cocktail party. In fact, she was sure she had heard Andrea say that Eunice was going to Alexandria for the week-end, but she said, "No."

"I wish you were. I don't care much for those things myself, but Andrea said . . . that is . . . I thought you both were . . . I'm to meet her there at five."

"Oh, fine," Beth said evenly. "It's nice for Andrea that you'll be here. A girl likes to go to parties alone, and poor lamb, pretty as she is, she doesn't have much chance to meet . . . escorts."

"I wish you were going to be there," he said again.

When she left him at the door, it was half-past six and she saw that dinner was already under way in the dining room, Andrea sitting in her place, waiting for her.

She didn't want to go in and sit down opposite Andrea at that moment. Not until she got over her resentment that Andrea should do a thing like that to her. It wasn't that she expected to tag along everywhere with Andrea, but she might at least have mentioned that she was going to take Dennis to Eunice's party.

Composing herself, she went into the dining room.

"Where have you been all afternoon?" Andrea asked at once.

"Oh, Dennis was waiting for me when I came out of the office," Beth said casually, "and we drove out to the country for lunch."

Andrea put down her soup spoon quite deliberately. "You forgot to mention it last night, or didn't you think it was important enough to mention?"

"Maybe I didn't know he was going to be there, or maybe I did forget to mention it," Beth said smoothly. "The way you forgot to mention that Eunice was having a cocktail party tomorrow. Not that it's any of my business."

"Implying that it's none of my business if you have a lunch date with Dennis, darling? Well! Here we are again, fighting over a man."

"Again!" Beth said icily.

RETRIBUTION

FIRE from Heaven fell on the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah and consumed them. Their very sites were obliterated and their tale was left as a warning to the wicked while the world should last.

Fire falls likewise now, in these stormy latter days, upon the mighty capital of the nation which launched this present war. Here is a man-made deluge of flame and smoke and thunder such as the world never saw before, except perhaps in the volcanic destruction of Pompeii and Herculaneum.

We cannot grasp the basic realities of such catastrophes. But surely it does seem, to the decent people who are a majority of mankind, that the bombardment of Berlin, and the immense devastation resulting, though wrought with human hands, represent a judgment of God on a nation and a city for the enormous wickedness they have practiced.

A thousand texts could be found in the Bible, to point this moral. As man or nation soweth, that they shall also reap.

CAR THEFTS

A new way to stop automobile theft is to be tried in Massachusetts. There were 320 stolen cars reported there in the first two weeks of November. Though nearly all were recovered promptly, it meant much unnecessary work for the already overburdened police. Unnecessary, because often the theft was invited by the driver leaving his keys in the ignition lock.

Determined to stop such foolishness, Frank A. Goodwin, state registrar of motor vehicles, plans to suspend the license of any such careless motorist.

This sounds a good deal like the Dutch mother who stopped her children from falling into the canal by spanking them when they did. But it worked in their case, and it may work also with the naughty children of Massachusetts.

TRAVELING

It takes 75 trains to move an armored division. So says the Pennsylvania Railroad, which ought to know.

Every carload of wives going to visit their husbands in service, or of people bored with home life who are running over to New York, Chicago or San Francisco to shop and see the shows, makes travel hard for that many soldiers being moved from one post to another or trying to get home once more before going overseas.

It is too high a price to pay for the satisfaction of the individual traveler. Good mottoes to remember are: "Travel unnecessarily and help Hitler; stay at home, and the boys will come back quicker."

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up early and soon away for the plant, there to take up duties that have multiplied with the progress of the war, multiplied to such an extent that no longer is the antiquated reporter able to find time to get out of the office and dig for such items as have filled this column for the last eight years. The writing is easy if the material is available, but obtaining that material requires several hours each day. And the scrivener does not get out of the plant, not even for lunch, from about 6 in the morning until 6 at night. So, until the war is over and the manpower shortage is relieved the antiquated reporter will be penning this column only as sufficient items to fill it accumulate.

It was a long time ago when Harry Hill went to school out at Pershon. Seventy-five boys and girls in the grades there then and of that number 26 men and six women, all more than 70 years of age, still are living and residents of Pickaway county. Harry passed on the names of the men, but refused to disclose identity of the women. "Women are touchy about their age," he declared, "and I'm revealing no secrets. The men are Fred Trump, William and Nelson Reid, Brough and James Pherson, Will and Paul Timmons, Joe Grabill, Will, Charles and Homer Neff, Carl Back, John Phillips, Marion and George Trimble, Robert, Ed, Harry and Charles Hill, Steptoe, Taswell and Claud Work, Thomas Shepherd, James Heath, Nelson Hill and George Ingram.

Home in most instances means more to the boy in service than it does to civilians. Allen Smith was in training at the Great Lakes Naval Station, and one day saw his name posted with some three score others slated for submarine duty. A call had gone out for volunteers for this branch and Seaman Smith had not volunteered. He called on his commanding officer, intent on advising him that he was not a submarine volunteer and that he preferred other branches of naval service. Before he had a chance to explain the officer commented on the fact that the sub volunteers were to get seven-day furloughs. Smith said not a single word of protest of his assignment. Anything to get back to Circleville if only for a week.

Cum Robinson was home on furlough from Macon, Ga. "Thought you won non-com stripes," a friend said. "Oh, I've been up there several times, but always something happens," Cum declared. "The last time I was a corporal and guarding 13 Italian prisoners of war. I loaded them on a truck and when I had difficulty getting aboard I handed my rifle to one of the Eyties to hold until I got on. A shave-tail saw me and I was a private again. And then there was the time I saw Jake Moore. He was coring the parade grounds and we were drilling. I hadn't seen Jake for a year, so I broke ranks and went over and talked to him. A private again. Guess I really am a PFD, a private for the duration."

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

MANPOWER WASTED
WASHINGTON—If the Army and Navy really want to save manpower and postpone the drafting of fathers, they might take a leaf from the book of venerable Admiral William Leahy, the President's chief of staff. No private guards or orderlies clutter his house, as they do those of certain other high-ranking persons. Instead, the admiral answers the door himself.

But if you approach the home of Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the fleet, a guard stops you on the grounds of the Naval Observatory while another guard is posted in front of the admiral's house. At this stage of the war it is inconceivable that an enemy might molest Admiral King's home. Joke is that the armed guards are posted outside a home which the admiral rarely occupies, for he usually sleeps on his yacht on the Potomac.

These dribbles of manpower are not important taken singly, but they are when you add them up. Lump together the lonely soldiers who will stand guard around the perfectly safe halls of congress, plus the heavy battery of regular troops which supplement the regular and efficient White House guards, plus all the other sentries standing watch around drowsy offices—and you get quite a total.

Jesse Jones, for instance, still requires a battery of guards to scrutinize visitors entering his commerce building when there is nothing inside which the enemy would want, except the fish aquarium in the basement. So does Henry Morgenthau require guards. Government personnel and budgets could be reduced by thousands now that the war has improved and J. Edgar Hoover has proved there is little enemy danger from within.

Finally, if the Army reduced the number of the U. S. troops patiently marking time in Alaska, now that Kiska and Attu have been cleaned out, several extra divisions would be available.

INVESTIGATE GOOD NEIGHBORS

Inside fact about Senator Butler's attack on the Good Neighbor policy is that the Nebraskan was given most of his ammunition by the U. S. embassies in Latin America. Unfortunate truth is that a lot of career diplomats distrust the two-fisted reform tactics of the Rockefeller office and were glad to spill their views to a listening senator.

Butler spent only two days in some countries. He hardly had time to get beyond the U. S. embassy and the fashionable clubs frequented by American business men.

In Rio, for example, Ambassador Jefferson Caffery told him, "At the rate we are pouring money into the Amazon, it will cost us hundreds of dollars for every pound of rubber." Ambassador Messersmith in Mexico City, who had a long-standing feud with the BEW, was glad to tell Butler that agencies outside the State department were muddying the waters of diplomacy.

Thus, Butler's report is an explosive symposium of all the complaints of U. S. diplomats who don't like to be speeded up by aggressive young Nelson Rockefeller, plus the complaints of U. S. business men who distrust federal spending anywhere.

However, the Butler probe may crack together the heads of U. S. representatives and teach them to cooperate. The cure for Butler's complaints is not cancellation of

DIET AND HEALTH

Food Prejudices Hard To Explain

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

"I REMEMBER it only too well," said my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, "Sunday noon. That was when my Uncle John used to come and have dinner with us. This goes back to about 1880.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

"Well, Saturday must have been a terrible day every week for Mother. When she went to market I could hear her murmuring under her shawl—John doesn't eat fish, and they have such nice bass in the market now."

"The list of things Uncle John did not eat would stretch from here to Moscow. And in the present later years of my life I wonder how he acquired those food habits.

Food Prejudices Unexplainable
"I can assess myself and I can see that I have many food habits that are simple nonsense. For instance, I can not eat liver. Any kind of liver—chicken, beef, lamb. Yet I know perfectly well that liver is a healthy food."

"Not only that, but my sister Clara years for liver. Every time I take her to a restaurant she selects liver. So it can't be a religious prejudice, nor one based on family remembrances, or admonitions.

"Then too I got over some of my earlier prejudices. I don't recall ever seeing sausage on the table at my father's house. And until I got married I never remember to have eaten sausage. Now I can't get enough of it."

"The consequences are deeper than you would imagine, on first thought. All prison riots begin with complaints about food. Admittedly the food itself is not the only cause for a riot, but when the atmosphere in any corrective institution becomes tense, for other reasons, one bad meal is enough to bring about a violent situation.

"And when I think of the number of marriages that are wrecked on account of poorly prepared foods, I am not surprised that the divorce courts are kept busy night and day.

Men Prefer Meat

"I see by the medical papers that a gentleman by the name of Selling, in Detroit, has interviewed a number of people to try to determine their food likes and dislikes. It appears that sex has something to do with it. Sixty-seven per cent of the men he questioned preferred meat, but only 35% of the women. The women were definitely in favor of cream, cheese and canned fruit."

"What part of the country or what part of the world you live in makes a difference. The Southerner likes his chitlins. Some people can't eat if the plate is too full, and vice versa.

"I remember having saved a man's reputation once by giving him some dietary advice. It was Judge Summerwell. Some lawyers came to me and said I ought to speak to him. He invariably fell asleep on the bench after the noon recess. I gave him a food questionnaire and finally talked him into having a light lunch and his heavy meal at night. That way he bothered only his family by going to sleep."

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Annual memorial services of the Circleville lodge of B. P. O. Elks were to be December 4 at the lodge home. In addition to ritualistic ceremonies, there was to be an address by the Rev. T. C. Harper of the United Brethren church and music by Miss Eleanor Snyder, accompanied by Miss Abbe Mills Clarke.

Edward Helwage and son, Bud, of North Court street, and Paul J. Dixon, Chillicothe, returned after a hunting trip in Pennsylvania, each bringing home a deer.

Miss Bertha Allen returned to New York City after spending a few days with Mrs. Helen F. Gunning, East Main street, and Mrs. James Patton of Columbus.

10 YEARS AGO

Complete codification of all industries and trades in the nation by January 1 was the goal set by the NRA.

Stanley B. Mathewson, Columbus, state director of the National Reemployment service, announced the opening of an office in the city building for the registrations of the unemployed in the county with the exception of four townships, Monroe, Darby, Scioto and Muhlberg, which were being handled by the Mt. Sterling office.

Miss Emmy Mulquin resigned as technician at Berger hospital where she had been employed for several months.

25 YEARS AGO

During a storm with wind reaching a high velocity, the 50-foot steel smokestack at the Rife and Morris company's elevator, East Mount street, was blown down, falling on the high tension wires

of the Ohio Utilities company and causing trouble with the fire alarm system wires.

Coblentz, the bridgehead on the Rhine which the American army was to occupy following the armistice, was formerly a fortress, dating back to the third century.

LeRoy Thompson, company cook in the fire and guard service at Pigs Point, Pa., was home on a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Thompson, Walnut township.

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, December 2, SWIFT MOVES and decisive action, based on a sudden opening for putting the affairs on a sound, far reaching and enduring basis, is forecast from important lunar and mutual aspects. There may be radical or strenuous activities, with excitement and commotion, affecting the emotions, mentality, and business relations. But it might be wiser to arrive at conclusions by diligence, shrewdness, sagacity and restraint rather than impetuosity, nervous tension or the use of force rather than finesse. With care the objectives may attain surprising heights, although there may be dramatic events and romantic thrills.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of an exciting, thrilling and adventurous year, in which romance, drama, upheaval and the unpredictable may be looked for in both private and public life. Sudden opportunities for attaining desired objectives require quick action but should be based on sound propositions, cool judgment and well-organized strategies rather than force, pressure and impetuosity. Maintain poise and good judgment in the most exciting crises, shunning impulsive, erratic or irregular tactics for sound policies.

A child born on this day may have much creative talent, be industrious and mentally sound and ambitious despite erratic or singular impulses. With care it should make an outstanding success, perhaps in public place.

CHAPTER THIRTY

DENNIS—Dennis sitting there at the wheel of a sleek black roadster when she left the office—was nothing to her at all, but when Beth saw him get out of the car and come toward her, smiling, she knew that he'd been waiting for her, and something swooped up and down just once inside her breast.

And, womanlike, she knew exactly what she looked like without looking in a mirror; blue jersey dress, shabby polo coat, blue felt beret with a worn spot where she stuck it on with pins, clean but mended yellow cotton gloves, oxford in need of a shine. Her hair would do, but she wasn't sure of her lipstick and, likely as not, there was a spot of carbon paper smudge somewhere on nose or cheek. Saturday nights she never stopped to repair her appearance. Now she made a mental resolution never to leave the building without being prepared for anything.

She said, "Hello, Dennis," and he said, "How do you do it? Up night-climbing until 3 o'clock, a whole morning of work, and you look as fresh as . . . as . . ."

"A daisy, Dennis? I think that's the right word."

"Maybe," he said, "but I was trying to think of something prettier. I had thought of quite a number of things I was going to tell you last night, but . . ."

"Last night was wonderful. I adored the marionettes and the Gypsy singers. Did you like them?" "I thought you looked tired. I wasn't sure you were enjoying yourself, and I wanted you to."

Beth thought, "I'm keeping him here talking. He's probably going to see Slade."

She said, "I did. And Andrea loved it, too. Didn't we thank you?"

"You did, but I hope to be thanked another way. I hope you haven't a date for lunch, or one for the afternoon."

"I haven't," Beth said, without stopping to think he might think she was jumping at an invitation. The next moment she knew, from the pleasure in his sensitive face, that he was thinking of nothing but how fortunate he was. "Good," he said boyishly, "because I want to show you a little of the country-side and I thought you might like the food at a little place out on the Mt. Vernon Parkway."

"Shall I get in?"

He tucked a robe around her knees and said he'd put the top up on the car if she wished it.

"I love to feel the wind and it can't make me look any worse than I do."

He didn't say anything that he might have said, but he looked at her appraisingly and said he liked little hats like hers.

The ride was a lovely one and

Beth found that their easy conversation came back as she thought it never would, and she sensed again that shared feeling of pleasure in each other's company, whether they talked of themselves or the weather. "I think winter is really coming," she said.

He considered it as if it were a weighty statement. "Right," he agreed. "It will be December first tomorrow."

"Not tomorrow, Dennis. Monday. I can't believe that Christmas will be here so soon."

"Will you be here Christmas?"

"I expect so. We've been invited to Pennington to spend the holiday with some friends, but I don't think I'll go. She didn't say that she had been dreading it because she would remember last Christmas and all her unhappiness, or that she had decided not to go anyway when Andrea was planning to go to Hawaii. "Of course it will depend on Andrea. She's so disappointed that she couldn't go out to marry Jim. Dennis, do you think we'll have war in the Pacific soon?"

"Only God and the Japanese government would know that, Beth, but I think Ronald was wise not to let her go out."

"Will you tell her that?"

Dennis said, "I'm a one-sided smile. Maybe I'm not so good at telling Andrea what to do or think as you are."

Beth plunged. "Did you ever advise her about marrying or not marrying Jim, Dennis?"

He took a long time answering and then he said, "I was not asked and there was no reason why I should have been."

Beth stared straight at the road ahead.

"Were you?"

She answered, "I was not asked and there was no reason why I should have been. I don't mean to be rude."

"I'm sure you don't. Would you be interested to know what I should have advised?"

"You know I would be."

"I should certainly have advised her to marry him, because they love each other."

"I feel the same way," she said in a low voice, and said nothing more until they came to the inn, but there were two ghosts riding with them, Andrea and Jim.

The inn was a wide-verandaed house set far back in the trees, and in the dining room a great fire blazed in a huge hearth, filling the room with warmth and light and the pleasant odor of burning hickory.

They lingered over a delicious lunch with which was served a light, fragrant wine. It was dusk before either of them realized that the afternoon was gone.

"What are you going to do tonight?" Dennis asked when he had composed herself, she went into the dining room.

"Where have you been all afternoon?" Andrea asked at once.

"Oh, Dennis was waiting for me when I came out of the office," Beth said casually, "and we drove out to the country for lunch."

Andrea put down her soup spoon quite deliberately. "You forgot to mention it last night, or didn't you think it was important enough to mention?"

"Maybe I didn't know he was going to be there, or maybe I did forget to mention it," Beth said smoothly. "The way you forgot to mention that Eunice was having a cocktail party tomorrow. Not that it's any of my business."

"Implying that it's none of my business if you have a lunch date with Dennis, darling? Well! Here we are again, fighting over a man."

"Again?" Beth asked lightly.

Hints on Etiquette

It is just as bad form for a girl stenographer to tell what is in a letter her employer has dictated to her or that she has seen on a desk or in the files, as it would be to open a letter addressed to someone else that she found lying around.

Words of Wisdom

Opposition and calumny are often the brightest tribute that vice and folly can pay to virtue and wisdom. — Rutherford B. Hayes.

Today's Horoscope

A birthday today gives diplomacy, excellent manners, strong ambitions and high ideals. You are generous and sympathetic but unyielding in your condemnation of ill-doing. Strive to be more tolerant and show more affection to your family. In the quiet hours of the night, at 1:38 a. m., come to an accurate estimate of an important business or political trend. At 8:30 a. m., you should be able to achieve a lot of good work by making an early start. Talk about the future plans of a young bride and groom at 10:24 p. m. or about the celebration of a wedding anniversary in the family. In either instance you should be able to make a worthwhile suggestion.

One-Minute Test Answers

A NEW CURE for colds is reported. Swell! Now what we need is a cure for the habit of telling other people how to cure their colds.

Prisoners of war, we hear, like to read detective stories. And, no doubt, any other type of escape literature.

Life would, indeed, be much smoother for columnists if they could always think up pretty fags for the holiday that is coming.

WE HAVE just finished looking at the softest prettiest piece of all wool it has been our pleasure to see in a long time—made into a Lounger Robe. Caddy Miller's has it and Kittie Fissell tells us he bought it away back when. In fact Kittie has the most complete line of robes to be found in Central Ohio. He tells us he has been criticized for buying heavily but this is one time that he knows he made no mistake. This robe is in plain navy and is priced at $16.95. Beautifully tailored with silk tassels on the belt the only decoration. He has other Robes at much less money and others are higher priced. These make practical gifts for father, brother, husband or for an elderly woman who really wants warmth in a Robe.

SUGAR AND SPICE and everything nice goes into the making of the fruit cakes that are for sale this year at Wallace's Bakery. They are made in one, two and three pound cakes. Daintily wrapped they make delightful gifts. Ingredients for these cakes are now difficult to get for the home maker so leave your order for your cakes early. They are priced at 70c per pound.

THE R. & R. FURNITURE Company has an array of tables to be given or kept. Kneehigh, Tall, in fact all sizes to use—whether for a potted plant, a single piece of glass, a cigarette box or your current piece of reading. Coffee tables priced $6.95 and higher, other tables as low as $3.95.

TO MARY—with love. One girl loves a soldier — one loves a sailor, another, a lad in the Marines but they will all love the exquisite diamond ring which says you are first in my heart. See the beautiful selection of sparkling diamonds in beautifully designed mountings in 14-K yellow gold from $29.75 up at the L. M. Butch Co., Jewelers.

IF THAT PERSON for whom you find it difficult to buy a gift, owns a car—The Western Auto Associate store has quite an array of heaters. Small heaters priced as low as $4.98 and larger ones that sell up to $19.95. They are Hot Wave Auto Heaters that are guaranteed to give satisfactory heat at low cost.

HARPSTER & YOST have come through again—this time they have real he boy sleds with flexible steel rims — imagine steel rims in 1943—Bought at a warehouse sale a long time ago. Streamlined, highly decorated and sturdily built. Here's a wartime gift that is not a wartime product—a real buy at $6.95 and $8.95. Other sleds made of wood, lower priced.

THE TINY SWEET smelling Mader's Candy Shop at 129 N. Court street, has a complete line of home-made hard candy, also pipes, smoking tobacco and tobacco pouches. Gifts for the hard to please.

HOSTESSES who look forward to informal entertaining this Winter will do well to stop into Stone's Grill for a supply of—Good Wine—It's a perfect starter for the holiday entertaining. the Good Neighbor program but better team work among U. S. agencies in foreign countries.

EXIT PAUL MCNUTT?

Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt is reported burning the midnight oil drafting a veto message for the President to send regarding the new draft bill passed by Congress. That bill would place fathers at the bottom of the draft list and take a large part of the draft administration out of McNutt's hands.

However, there is a large possibility that McNutt will be disappointed and that the President will not accept the McNutt veto message or veto the bill at all. In that case, McNutt's friends say, he is almost certain to slide gracefully out of Washington. Real fact is that McNutt is not so concerned with the father-derement part of the bill as with Congressional meddling with the administrative set-up of his War Manpower Commission by which considerable power is taken away from him and given to General Hershey, Selective Service Director.

Entirely aside from this, however, McNutt is fed up with things and would just as soon get out of Washington. Those who know anything about his job realize that it has been an almost impossible one. Probably he has done better than most people, but even so, he is one of the most abused men in Washington.

Therefore close friends say that Paul has been keeping his eyes open for a business connection: first because living on a government salary has depleted his finances; second

Just the Gift for him

DAD Mother Her brother Sister

WE HAVE just finished looking at the softest prettiest piece of all wool it has been our pleasure to see in a long time—made into a Lounger Robe. Caddy Miller's has it and Kittie Fissell tells us he bought it away back when. In fact Kittie has the most complete line of robes to see in Central Ohio. He tells us he has been criticized for buying heavily but this is one time that he knows he made no mistake. This robe is in plain navy and is priced at $16.95. Beautifully tailored with silk tassels on the belt the only decoration. He has other Robes at much less money and others are higher priced. These make practical gifts for father, brother, husband or for an elderly woman who really wants warmth in a Robe.

SUGAR AND SPICE and everything nice goes into the making of the fruit cakes that are for sale this year at Wallace's Bakery. They are made in one, two and three pound cakes. Daintily wrapped they make delightful gifts. Ingredients for these cakes are now difficult to get for the home maker so leave your order for your cakes early. They are priced at 70c per pound.

"MRS. MINIVER"

A pre-Christmas treat of top entertainment is Cecil B. DeMille's present to tired Yuletide shoppers on Monday, December 6, when the Radio Theatre presents Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon in their touching motion picture success, "Mrs. Miniver." Radio's only full-hour dramatic program is heard over the Columbia network at 8 p. m.

Adapted from Jan Struther's successful novel showing the effect of the war on a middle-class British family, "Mrs. Miniver" won universal critical plaudits and was a huge success at movie box-offices throughout the country. The action of the story takes place before and during the Nazi bombardment of London.

The Miniver family is headed by Clem Miniver, portrayed by Walter Pidgeon, and his wife will be enacted by Greer Garson. At the outbreak of the war their eldest son promptly joins the RAF. Two small children remain at their countryside home.

WALLER, BERT LAHR

Thomas "Fats" Waller, the three-hundred pound man of hot music, Comedian Bert Lahr, and Hollywood's new soprano starlet, Jane Powell, will be Charlie McCarthy's and Edgar Bergen's guests on their Sunday night show at 7 p. m. over NBC. Lahr has been signed for three consecutive appearances.

"Fats" Waller, the composer of such popular tunes as "Honey-Suckle Rose" and "Ain't Misbehavin'" is currently appearing in Hollywood at the Florentine Gardens. The versatile and talented musician recently completed a motion picture with Lena Horne, and earlier in the Fall, wrote the music for the popular Broadway musical "Early to Bed."

Bert Lahr, the comedian who can sing with more enthusiasm than talent, may try to interest Charlie with the proposition of becoming his agent. Charlie scored a recent success in the agent field when he sold Bergen the talents of fourteen-year-old Jane Powell. In addition, to her appearance on the program, Charlie has the pretty little singing star billed with him in his next movie, "It's Great To Be Young."

CHOO CHOO JOHNSON

One of the most popular cover girls in the country, Harry Conover's model, Choo Choo Johnson, and Shep Fields, the bandman with originality now playing at New York's Strand Theatre, will help Ellery Queen cope with the "Adventure of the Dying Mes-
